Today's Gospel Reflection

The beatitudes are not prescriptions on how to live the Gospel life. Rather, they are descriptions of what the Gospel life is like. And those descriptions find their concrete expression, or flesh-and-blood interpretation, in the person of the saints. The beatitudes are illustrated for us by the life stories of real people who struggled, fell, failed, got up, and tried again and again. One thing was common to them- their childlike trust in the God of grace. By their faith-filled commitment to the Gospel, the saints unmasked the illusion of happiness promoted by the world. The difficult but happy lives they lived attest to the authoritative words of Jesus, who himself was the first embodiment of the beatitudes that he taught.

Lord Jesus, endow us with the wisdom of the saints, who listened to the beatitudes with their hearts and manifested them in their lives. Amen.
